ARMY AGENTS HERE FOR 3-DAY MEETING

Intelligence Aides Will Hear Former OSS Man

Five hundred present and former agents of the United States Army Intelligence Corps are due in Cleveland today for a three-day national convention of the National Counter Intelligence Corps Association.

LYMAN B. KIRKPATRICK

Three men high in the intelligence service are due to attend the meetings. Maj. Gen. John K. Rice, former chief of counter intelligence, and his successor, Brig. Gen. Philip Gallagher, former superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, will talk at a closed meeting tomorrow morning at 10 in Hotel Hollenden, where all convention sessions will be held.

Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, assistant executive officer of the Central Intelligence Agency, will be the principal speaker at the banquet at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Kirkpatrick served with the Office of Strategic Services in Europe during World War II. He became assistant to Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, last October.

Europe Is Represented

Arthur F. Stitt, an investigator for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad police department and chairman of the national board of the association, said delegates would come from all parts of the United States and some parts of Europe. The convention will close Sunday with a get-together session.

James L. Broz, assistant Cleveland law director, is president of the Cleveland Intelligence Corps Club, which is host to the convention. The national organization had its beginning in Cleveland. George W. Morris, technical adviser to the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Cleveland, is national treasurer of the association.

Charles C. Deubel, an attorney of Newark, N. J., is national president.

The program for today is given over to registration, a get-together and a meeting of the board of governors. A business meeting will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow. The
